

Joshua Pollard
President & CEO of Omicelo

Joshua is a real estate expert and CEO of Omicelo, a mission-driven real estate investment firm. The mission of Omicelo is Home | Health | Wealth. Prior to founding Omicelo, Joshua led US housing research for Goldman Sachs from 2009 to 2013. He spent the previous five years as a critical member of the Goldman Sachs' universal research team that found equity capital markets opportunities in real estate, engineering & construction and other industrial sectors. During this time at that firm Joshua led research for the $1 billion IPO of Realogy, the owner of Century21 & Coldwell Banker, he received numerous awards including an addition to Forbes' 30 under 30 list and he was the youngest person in Goldman Sachs' history to lead an equity research practice. In addition to chairing the board of Omicelo Cares, the education-based nonprofit affiliated with Omicelo, Joshua is a board member for companies that are building entrepreneurs, supporting communities and creating a 21st century workforce. Joshua also contributes for Forbes.com on real estate investing and Opportunity Zones.